May George Washington's Birthday Never Grow Old

T'S a good thing for all of us, at certain times, to ay honor to the Nation's great men. We want our young people to feel the inspiration of such patriotism and devotion to great ideals as these men showed.

There's no better way to accomplish this than for all of us, business men, parents, teachers, to make a point of celebrating such days as Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays. It shows that we consider such men more than a mere historical name.

We can all be patriots such as they, even in our local affairs: there's nothing too small or unimportant to do in that spirit.
